~~Unlike futures contracts, there is a margin when you buy most options. You have to pay the whole option premium up front. Therefore, options in volatile markets like crude oil can cost several thousand dollars. That may not be suitable for all options traders, and you don't want to make the mistake of buying deep out of the money options just because they are in your price range.~~

~~Know the Right Time to Buy a Call Option~~

~~When you sell an option to open a position, you will receive money. The goal is to buy back the option position for less than you initially received for it. Selling an option without owning the underlying asset is also referred to as trading 'naked'. So a naked call is simply a standalone short call position.~~

~~Should You Buy Or Sell Options? | Trade Options With Me~~

~~When selling options, you have either the obligation to buy or sell the underlying security at a specified price (the strike price), once again dependent on if Calls or Puts were purchased. When selling options, you're receiving a 'credit' in the form of the premium for the contract (s) you sold.~~

~~A Beginners Guide To Buying Options vs Selling Options~~

~~When you sell a put, your payoff is straightforward: If the strike price is $180 and the price drops below $180 per share on or before the expiration date, you must purchase the shares at $180. Your breakeven price is $168, which is the $180 strike price minus the premium you receive ($12 per share).~~
