Archaeological
resources are typically evaluated

through a three-
step process.

The first step,
Stage 1,

consists of
documentary
research using historic

secondary sources to determine the likelihood that
archaeological
resources that may be eligible

periodically.

They reached their most exaggerated form

in the third quarter of the 15th century
before falling
out of fashion
in the 1480s.
